CREATIVE DRAMA

Although it is hard to explain the drama we can say that drama is the acting of a single word, concept, sound, scene, story, poem or made up stories belong to children.

The basic terms of the drama are psycho-drama which is for adults and creative-drama which is for children. Both of them are educating types of drama. Dramas for adolescents involves common features of both types of drama. Materials should be suitable for their interest and needs. It is aimed to learn concepts by interacting, cooperating with the emotions in an active, social way. In drama, one can be aware of his/her personality and s/he can improve his/her communication skills, learn how to be empathetic, and also his/her social and interactive skills improve.

Drama should take its place in schools to let pupils have a sense of self. Confidence and feel the success with the taste of being creative and thus be happy.
